MY recollection is now to serve me to relate an instance of Church operations in New York, which will constitute a striking contrast to much that has just gone before. There is nothing in the whole course of my not uneventful sojourn in America that it affords me so much pleasure to look back upon as the humble aid it was permitted me to render on this occasion--that, namely, of founding and organizing a Mission Chapel in which Anglo-Catholic Church Ritualism might be correctly observed, and Anglo-Catholic teaching faithfully enforced, while missionary work was earnestly carried on in the populous district around, --more particularly among the English of the working classes, who are numerous, and were too much overlooked. One object we had in view was perhaps pretentious. It was to present...
